Century Minerals is an Australian junior exploration company with an experienced exploration management team in early stage exploration projects within Australia and internationally.

Proposed Exploration Program in Block 9, Stavely Arc

Century Minerals proposes to explore for copper, gold and other metals in the western part of the Stavely Arc. If an exploration licence is granted, Century Minerals intends to undertake geophysics and geochemistry work to understand the underlying geological systems and help identify mineralisation targets. The company then intends to test and define these targets in the second and third year of the exploration program.

Approach to engaging with communities

Through previous exploration projects in western Victoria, Century Minerals exploration management representatives have developed relationships with local landholders and stakeholders in the Stavely Arc region. Before commencement of exploration activities, the company intends to complete a risk assessment regarding potential impacts on local communities and the environment. For all exploration activities planned, before these activities commence, the company plans to communicate with affected parties on a one-on-one basis, with the local land owners and residents appropriate to the activity being conducted. This will include visits to landholders to provide information about the activities planned and timings.
